CD9 GOP candidate Ferrara boasts 6-figure haul

Former Naval doctor ends 2017 with nearly $600,000 raised

Republican Steve Ferrara announced he ended 2017 with $560,000 raised for his Congressional District 9 campaign.

The impressive fundraising haul comes despite having never run for public office after 25 years in the U.S. Navy.

“The amount of people excited about this campaign is very humbling to me,” Ferrara said. “Voters in Arizona recognize that my experience as a combat doctor and Chief Medical Officer of the U.S. Navy will help fix a broken health care system that fails to put the patient first.”

Ferrara raised $140,000 in the fourth quarter and heads into 2018 with nearly $450,000 cash on hand.

Ferrara has already earned the National Republican Congressional Committee’s “Young Gun” status because of his impressive early fundraising.

“I am continuing to meet supporters both in CD9 and around the country who support a strong military, a common sense healthcare system and a Veterans Administration system that cares for the men and women who protected this nation,” Ferrara said. “I’m proud of my military service and look forward to meeting the voters of CD9 and earning their trust and support.”
